Nor envy we
Thy great renown, nor grudge thy victory. Dryden.
- TO RENOWN, v. a. [renommer, Fr. from the noun.] To make famous.
Let us satisfy our eyes
With the memorials and the things of fame,
That do renown this city. Shakefp. Twelfth Night.
Soft elocution does thy style renown,
Gentle or sharp according to thy choice,
To laugh at follies, or to lash at vice. Dryden.
In solemn silence stand
Stern tyrants, whom their cruelties renown,
And emperors in Parian marble frown. Addison.
A bard, whom pilfer'd pastorals renown,
Just writes to make his barrenness appear. Pope.
- RENOUWNED, particp. adj. [from renown.] Famous; celebrated; eminent; famed.
These were the renowned of the congregation, princes of the tribes, heads of thousands. Numb. i. 16.
That thrice renowned and learned French king, finding Petrarch's tomb without any inscription, wrote one himself; saying, shame it was, that he who sung his mistress's praise seven years before her death, should twelve years want an epitaph. Peacham on Poetry.
- The rest were long to tell, though far renown'd. Milton.
Of all the cities in Roman lands,
The chief and most renown'd Ravenna stands,
Adorn'd in ancient times with arms and arts. Dryden.
Ilva,
An ile renown'd for steel and unexhausted mines. Dryden.

REP

- RENT, n. f. [from rend.] A break; a laceration.
Thou viper
Hast cancell'd kindred, made a rent in nature,
And through her holy bowels gnaw'd thy way, Dryden.
Through thy own blood to empire.
He who sees this vast rent in so high a rock, how the convex parts of one side exactly tally with the concave of the other, must be satisfied, that it was the effect of an earthquake. Addison's Remarks on Italy.
- TO RENT, v. a. [rather to rend.] To tear; to lacerate.
A time to rent, and a time to sew. Ecclis. iii. 7.
- TO RENT, v. n. [now written rant.] To roar; to bluster; we still say, a tearing fellow, for a noisy bully.
He ventur'd to diminish his fear,
That partings went to rent and tear,
And give the desperate attack
To danger still behind its back. Hadibras, p. iii.
- RENT, n. f. [rente, Fr.]
1. Revenue; annual payment.
Idol ceremony,
What are thy rents? what are thy comings in?
O ceremony! shew me but thy worth! Shakefp. Hen. V.
I bought an annual rent of two,
And live just as you see I do. Pope's Epist. of Horace.
2. Money paid for any thing held of another.
Such is the mould, that the blest tenant feeds
On precious fruits, and pays his rent in weeds. Waller.
Folks in mudwall tenements,
Present a peppercorn for rent. Prior.
- TO RENT, v. a. [renter, Fr.]
1. To hold by paying rent.
When a servant is called before his master, it is often to know, whether he passed by such a ground, if the old man, who rents it, is in good health. Addison's Spectator.
2. To let to a tenant.
- RENTABLE, adj. [from rent.] That may be rented.

Go mount the winds, and to the shades repair. Pope.
- REPAIR, n. f. [repare, Fr. from the verb.]
1. Refort; abode.

REP

- So 'scapes th' insulding fire his narrow jail,
And makes small outlets into open air;
There the fierce winds his tender force assail,
And beat him downward to his first repair. Dryden.
2. Act of betaking himself any whither.
The king sent a proclamation for their repair to their houses, and for a preservation of the peace. Clarendon.
- REPAIRER, n. f. [from repair.] Amender; restorer.
He that governs well, leads the blind, but he that teaches, gives him eyes; and it is a glorious thing to have been the repairer of a decayed intellect. South's Sermons.
O sacred rest!
O peace of mind! repairer of decay,
Whose balms renew the limbs to labours of the day. Dryden.
- REPAINDOUS, adj. [repandus, Lat.] Bent upwards.
Though they be drawn repandous or convexly crooked in one piece, yet the dolphin that carrieth Arion is concavously inverted, and hath its spine depressed in another. Brown.
- REPARABLE, adj. [reparable, Fr. reparabilis, Lat.] Capable of being amended, retrieved, or supplied by something equivalent.
The parts in man's body easily reparable, as spirits, blood and flesh, die in the embracement of the parts hardly reparable, as bones, nerves and membranes. Bacon.
When its spirit is drawn from wine, it will not, by the re-union of its constituent liquors, be reduced to its pristine nature; because the workmanship of nature, in the disposition of the parts, was too elaborate to be imitable, or reparable by the bare apposition of those divided parts to each other. Boyle.
An adulterous person is tied to restitution of the injury, so far as it is reparable, and can be made to the wronged person; to make provision for the children begotten in unlawful embraces. Taylor's Rule of Living Holy.
- REPARABLY, adv. [from reparable.] In a manner capable of remedy by restitution, amendment or supply.
